

1.

A: I hear you've got a new house mate.

B: That's right. Dmitri has gone back to Russia.

A: He had that room on the second floor with a view of the park.

2.

B: Yes. Jose has moved into that room now. I was going to move too, down into Jose's old room, but it didn't work out.

A: What happened?

B: Too much vodka and a piano.

A: What?

3.

B: The night before Dmitri moved out we had a party for him.

A: Everyone likes a party.

B: There was lots of Russian vodka and Jose had a really good time.

A: I think I understand.

4.

B: In the morning Jose and I were going to help each other move but guess who wasn't up by noon?

A: Our good friend from Ecuador.

B: You guessed it. So, I had to ask Nkoyo to help me move all his stuff up to Dmitri's old room.

5.

A: Jose was not in good shape.

B: Neither was his room. He had not packed anything.

A: He's a lucky guy to have friends like you.

B: Anyway, we had just moved the last things out of Jose's room and the door bell rang.

6.

A: It was your new house mate?

B: No. It was her piano.

A: Ah, the piano.

B: We had no choice. We put it into the empty room and I'm still in the room upstairs.
